ELECTRICITY DEREGULATION

QUESTION: Do you support or oppose legislation that will ensure that standard electric service is provided at rates that are cost-based and reasonable?

AARP supports

Diane Allison (Democrat) supports

Marguerite Quinn (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

In the hope of encouraging lower prices, Pennsylvania adopted a law restructuring the state's utility industry to allow consumers to purchase electric services from competing suppliers, rather than through the traditional regulated monopoly. During the transition period to a competitive market, the state capped residential rates charged by the existing utilities. Deregulation has failed to produce any of the benefits its supporters predicted. Rates in Pennsylvania are predicted to rise by 50% once price caps are lifted. Similar price increases have been seen in other states with deregulated electricity markets. AARP believes that Pennsylvania should adopt restructuring reforms that are based on a portfolio of diverse contract terms and services, integrating energy efficiency and renewable resources as appropriate to ensure that standard electric service (known as Standard Offer Service) is affordable, available and reliable.

Diane Allison (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I agree with your analysis and positions. In addition to your restructuring reforms, I would add that electric companies should be required to offer every customer—Time of Day Rates. This is an additional way that consumers can control their own fate and control costs by scheduling their use in off Peak, less expensive hours as much as possible. I have had this for 30 years in my home and it really does reduce your costs if you are willing to shift your usage to off peak hours.

LOTTERY FUND AND HOME-AND-COMMUNITY BASED CARE

QUESTION: Do you support or oppose using lottery revenues to expand existing home-and-community based care programs offered by local Area Agencies on Aging?

AARP supports

Diane Allison (Democrat) supports
Marguerite Quinn (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

The Pennsylvania Lottery was established to generate funds to benefit programs for the Commonwealth's older residents. Since 1972, when its first game went on sale, the Pennsylvania Lottery has contributed more than $17.4 billion to a wide variety of programs. Recently, because of new lottery offerings and changes in some of the programs the lottery supports such as PACE and the property tax/rent rebate program, the lottery has shown a significant surplus. Part of this surplus has been used for the long-term care Medicaid program, which funds mainly nursing home care, while another lottery program that provides home and community based care services through local Area Agencies on Aging has not seen an increase in funding.

AARP strongly supports the expansion of home-and-community based care services as an alternative to nursing home care. AARP believes lottery revenues should be used to expand existing lottery funded home-and-community based care programs instead of being diverted into the Medicaid long-term care program.

Diane Allison (Democrat) RESPONSE:

As someone who helped care for my grandmother at home until her death and as a driver for Meals on Wheels, I see how important it is for people to be able to remain in their home whenever possible. Home and Community based care saves money and gives folks the opportunity to remain in the place that is familiar and comfortable to them.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

QUESTION: In the face of escalating costs, how would you reform the state's health care system to make it available, affordable and accessible for every Pennsylvanian?

Encourage employers to offer/expand coverage.

Subsidize the cost of private coverage for un-/underinsured.

Marguerite Quinn (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

There are over 700,000 Pennsylvanians who are without health insurance in Pennsylvania. Various proposals have been made in the General Assembly this year to help more Pennsylvanians obtain health insurance and to ensure that insurance is more affordable for individuals and for businesses. AARP Pennsylvania supports measures to achieve access to affordable health care coverage for all individuals, an approach that would address the needs of those without public or private insurance or those at risk of losing coverage. Adequate health care coverage allows patients to receive essential treatment, including preventive care that can save the state millions of dollars.

AARP Pennsylvania supports incremental reforms that significantly improve coverage options for those without public or private insurance or those at risk of losing coverage. These reforms include encouraging employers to offer and expand coverage, and subsidizing the cost of private coverage for those who are uninsured, underinsured or at risk of losing coverage.

Diane Allison (Democrat) RESPONSE:

Health care needs major reform. I have been studying HB 1660-a single payer plan which would make health care more available to everyone and while more detail is needed on the funding, this plan would close the gaps for seniors. One such gap is dental coverage for low income seniors which is a great need. Poor dental care leads to major health problems. Coverage for preventative care would save health care dollars and improve quality of life for seniors by preventing serious complications resulting from poor dental care.

PROPERTY TAX

QUESTION: What do you propose to do to lower the property tax burden on older Pennsylvanians yet still provide support for our schools?

Broaden the method of financing public education

AARP supports

 Diane Allison (Democrat) supports

Reduce burden of property taxes

 AARP supports

 Diane Allison (Democrat) supports
Marguerite Quinn (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

As the Commonwealth's support for public education has fallen to a statewide average of approximately 35% of a school district's budget, property taxes have become the main source of funding for Pennsylvania's schools. Disparities in funding across Pennsylvania mean that some school districts rely on local funding, mainly property taxes, for over 80% of the district's budget. AARP believes we should broaden our method of financing public education, taking some of the burden off the regressive property tax, which is the single-most burdensome tax for many low-income and older people, and shifting to less regressive taxes, which are better correlated with the ability to pay.

Diane Allison (Democrat) RESPONSE:

Property tax reduction is an issue that seems to go without a solution year after year. There is a long list of proposals on the table but none ever seem to move onto a solution. I agree with the concept of progressive taxes that are better correlated with ability to pay. I also feel that one of the quickest ways to offer a solution is to help school districts reduce costs. To this end I would promote the organizing of teachers health insurance benefits on a state wide basis, this would reduce the costs. The state could also organize a statewide debt service rate for district so that each district could benefit from the best possible rates.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

QUESTION: Would you support or oppose the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate?

 AARP supports

 Diane Allison (Democrat) supports
Marguerite Quinn (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

Insurance products have become increasingly complex and expensive. Currently, the Department of Insurance is charged with both regulating the insurance industry and protecting consumers, putting them at odds with both groups on certain issues. AARP supports the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate within the Pennsylvania Attorney General’s Office that would function similar to the Public Utility Commissions Office of Consumer Advocate and represent the interests of the consumer in hearings.

Diane Allison (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I support the creation of the Insurance Consumer Advocate. Insurance matters are very complex and the consumer, especially seniors need an advocate someone that is looking out for them.

WINTER UTILITY SHUT-OFFS AND LIHEAP FUNDING

QUESTION 1: Do you support or oppose requiring utility companies to get PUC approval before cutting off service to residential customers in the winter months?

QUESTION 2: Do you believe Pennsylvania should contribute state funds to the LIHEAP budget?

AARP supports

Diane Allison (Democrat) chose not to mark a box

Marguerite Quinn (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

Home energy costs make up a considerable portion of household budgets. Exceedingly volatile natural gas, electricity and fuel oil prices in recent years have significantly increased energy costs facing many consumers. Older Americans are particularly vulnerable to rapid increases in energy prices. Older low-income households spend a higher percentage of total income on energy costs than do other households. AARP supports state programs to address energy affordability including bill payment assistance programs for low-income residential customers; automatic enrollment of electric and natural gas customers into assistance programs; and prohibitions on utilities from disconnecting or refusing to reconnect electric or natural gas service to low-income households during times when weather conditions threaten health and safety.

Diane Allison (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I support requiring PUC approval before shut-off. There are many complex situations that could result in a person or household facing shut off. This shut off could result in death and needs to be taken seriously and requires us to go above and beyond in our efforts to assure that no one's life is endangered as a result of the shut off. I would have to consider the state contribution to the funding of LIHEA when I consider the budget but I am open to considering that additional support.
