

2008 Pennsylvania, PA House District 156

Candidates:

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith, Democrat
Shannon Royer, Republican

Questions:

Electricity Deregulation

Lottery Fund & Home/Community Care

Health Care Reform

Property Tax

Consumer Protection

Winter Utility Shut-Offs & LIHEAP Funding

Candidates were asked to check either the support or oppose boxes.

Supports Opposes The candidate chose not to mark a box

ELECTRICITY DEREGULATION

QUESTION: Do you support or oppose legislation that will ensure that standard electric service is provided at rates that are cost-based and reasonable?

AARP supports

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports

Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

AARP RESPONSE:

In the hope of encouraging lower prices, Pennsylvania adopted a law restructuring the state's utility industry to allow consumers to purchase electric services from competing suppliers, rather than through the traditional regulated monopoly. During the transition period to a competitive market, the state capped residential rates charged by the existing utilities. Deregulation has failed to produce any of the benefits its supporters predicted. Rates in Pennsylvania are predicted to rise by 50% once price caps are lifted. Similar price increases have been seen in other states with deregulated electricity markets. AARP believes that Pennsylvania should adopt restructuring reforms that are based on a portfolio of diverse contract terms and services, integrating energy efficiency and renewable resources as appropriate to ensure that standard electric service (known as Standard Offer Service) are affordable, available and reliable.

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I support electricity restructuring reform legislation.

Shannon Royer (Republican) RESPONSE:

Elected officials must work harder to lower energy costs for Pennsylvania residents. Retired individuals as well as all Pennsylvanians are struggling to keep up with rapidly increasing energy costs. We need to take bold steps to lessen the impact of rising electric bills because of the electric cap issue. Harrisburg must examine a reduction in the state's Utility Gross Receipts Tax (a tax on our electric bills) to help Pennsylvanians pay for electrical usage.

LOTTERY FUND AND HOME-AND-COMMUNITY BASED CARE

QUESTION: Do you support or oppose using lottery revenues to expand existing home-and-community based care programs offered by local Area Agencies on Aging?

AARP supports

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports

Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

AARP RESPONSE:

The Pennsylvania Lottery was established to generate funds to benefit programs for the Commonwealth's older residents. Since 1972, when its first game went on sale, the Pennsylvania Lottery has contributed more than $17.4 billion to a wide variety of programs. Recently, because of new lottery offerings and changes in some of the programs the lottery supports such as PACE and the property tax/rent rebate program, the lottery has shown a significant surplus. Part of this surplus has been used for the long-term care Medicaid program, which funds mainly nursing home care, while another lottery program that provides home and community based care services through local Area Agencies on Aging has not seen an increase in funding.

AARP strongly supports the expansion of home-and-community based care services as an alternative to nursing home care. AARP believes lottery revenues should be used to expand existing lottery funded home-and-community based care programs instead of being diverted into the Medicaid long-term care program.

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I support using lottery revenues to expand home and community based care options.

Shannon Royer (Republican) RESPONSE:

As someone who has been involved for twelve years with the West Chester Area Senior Center as a volunteer and a board member, I know how vitally important funding from the Pennsylvania Lottery is to programs for older adults. I strongly support the AARP's position of using lottery funds to expand home-and-community based care programs.

- Return to List of Questions -

HEALTH CARE REFORM

QUESTION: In the face of escalating costs, how would you reform the state's health care system to make it available, affordable and accessible for every Pennsylvanian?

Encourage employers to offer/expand coverage.

- AARP supports
- Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports
- Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

Subsidize the cost of private coverage for un-/underinsured.

- AARP supports
- Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports
- Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

AARP RESPONSE:

There are over 700,000 Pennsylvanians who are without health insurance in Pennsylvania. Various proposals have been made in the General Assembly this year to help more Pennsylvanians obtain health insurance and to ensure that insurance is more affordable for individuals and for businesses. AARP Pennsylvania supports measures to achieve access to affordable health care coverage for all individuals, an approach that would address the needs of those without public or private insurance or those at risk of losing coverage. Adequate health care coverage allows patients to receive essential treatment, including preventive care that can save the state millions of dollars.

AARP Pennsylvania supports incremental reforms that significantly improve coverage options for those without public or private insurance or those at risk of losing coverage. These reforms include encouraging employers to offer and expand coverage, and subsidizing the cost of private coverage for those who are uninsured, underinsured or at risk of losing coverage.

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I am the Number Two sponsor on HB 1660, the Family and Business Health Security Act which was introduced on June 28, 2007. Please go to www.healthcare4allPA.org to get the full story of how to change our current system.

Shannon Royer (Republican) RESPONSE:

Sadly, Harrisburg politicians have failed to implement real health care reform. I support making health care more accessible and affordable by providing tax incentives for employers who provide health care to workers, creating incentives for proactive healthy living efforts, expanding tax credits for Health Savings Accounts, having the state use its purchasing power to negotiate an inexpensive group policy for the uninsured, and investigating the possibility of purchasing less expensive health care coverage from other states.

PROPERTY TAX

QUESTION: What do you propose to do to lower the property tax burden on older Pennsylvanians yet still provide support for our schools?

Broaden the method of financing public education

-  AARP supports
-  Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports
-  Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

Reduce burden of property taxes

-  AARP supports
-  Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports
-  Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

AARP RESPONSE:

As the Commonwealth's support for public education has fallen to a statewide average of approximately 35% of a school district's budget, property taxes have become the main source of funding for Pennsylvania's schools. Disparities in funding across Pennsylvania mean that some school districts rely on local funding, mainly property taxes, for over 80% of the district's budget. AARP believes we should broaden our method of financing public education, taking some of the burden off the regressive property tax, which is the single-most burdensome tax for many low-income and older people, and shifting to less regressive taxes, which are better correlated with the ability to pay.

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I am a cosponsor on HB 1275 which would eliminate property taxes for all Pennsylvanians. I also voted in favor of House Bill 1947 which would allow the elimination to take place, constitutionally. In order to fund schools, we need to use broad-based taxes such as state income taxes and sales taxes. And we need to broaden the sales tax base by including some items that had not previously been taxed.

Shannon Royer (Republican) RESPONSE:

As a local elected official for eight years, I helped balance budgets without raising property taxes every year I was in office. Escalating property taxes around Pennsylvania are hurting our residents by increasing people's rent and forcing many older adults to make painful decisions about selling their homes. I strongly support legislation that uses funding from the state slot machine revenue to either eliminate or freeze school property taxes for retired individuals. In addition, I support increasing state aid to our schools so that our children and grandchildren get the education they deserve and to help lower property taxes for everyone. We must demand property tax relief now!

CONSUMER PROTECTION

QUESTION: Would you support or oppose the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate?

AARP supports

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports

Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

AARP RESPONSE:

Insurance products have become increasingly complex and expensive. Currently, the Department of Insurance is charged with both regulating the insurance industry and protecting consumers, putting them at odds with both groups on certain issues. AARP supports the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate within the Pennsylvania Attorney General's Office that would function similar to the Public Utility Commissions Office of Consumer Advocate and represent the interests of the consumer in hearings.

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I support the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate.

Shannon Royer (Republican) RESPONSE:

I very much favor the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate. This will help give a voice to consumers when dealing with important insurance issues in our state.

- Return to List of Questions -

WINTER UTILITY SHUT-OFFS AND LIHEAP FUNDING

QUESTION 1: Do you support or oppose requiring utility companies to get PUC approval before cutting off service to residential customers in the winter months?

AARP supports

Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) chose not to mark a box.

QUESTION 2: Do you believe Pennsylvania should contribute state funds to the LIHEAP budget?

AARP supports

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) supports

Shannon Royer (Republican) supports

AARP RESPONSE:

Home energy costs make up a considerable portion of household budgets. Exceedingly volatile natural gas, electricity and fuel oil prices in recent years have significantly increased energy costs facing many consumers. Older Americans are particularly vulnerable to rapid increases in energy prices. Older low-income households spend a higher percentage of total income on energy costs than do other households. AARP supports state programs to address energy affordability including bill payment assistance programs for low-income residential customers; automatic enrollment of electric and natural gas customers into assistance programs; and prohibitions on utilities from disconnecting or refusing to reconnect electric or natural gas service to low-income households during times when weather conditions threaten health and safety.

Barbara McIlvaine-Smith (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I support the state contributing state funds to the LIHEAP budget.

Shannon Royer (Republican) RESPONSE:

As someone who has worked with older adults for many years, I know there is great concern about rising energy costs. Pennsylvania's retired citizens should never feel threatened that they will lose utility service because of an inability to pay their bills. I strongly support requiring utility companies to get PUC approval before service termination, and I also strongly support state funding for LIHEAP. Maintaining a consistent level of utility service for older adults is critically important, and Pennsylvania's elected officials should do everything they can to make this happen.