ELECTRICITY DEREGULATION

QUESTION: Do you support or oppose legislation that will ensure that standard electric service is provided at rates that are cost-based and reasonable?

AARP supports

Tom Peterson (Democrat) supports

Paul Clymer (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

In the hope of encouraging lower prices, Pennsylvania adopted a law restructuring the state's utility industry to allow consumers to purchase electric services from competing suppliers, rather than through the traditional regulated monopoly. During the transition period to a competitive market, the state capped residential rates charged by the existing utilities. Deregulation has failed to produce any of the benefits its supporters predicted. Rates in Pennsylvania are predicted to rise by 50% once price caps are lifted. Similar price increases have been seen in other states with deregulated electricity markets. AARP believes that Pennsylvania should adopt restructuring reforms that are based on a portfolio of diverse contract terms and services, integrating energy efficiency and renewable resources as appropriate to ensure that standard electric service (known as Standard Offer Service) is affordable, available and reliable.

Tom Peterson (Democrat) RESPONSE:

Most of our district is served by PPL for electric service. We also have local municipalities that distribute electricity within their boundaries. We face unprecedented rate increases under looming deregulation. While PPL tells Wall Street about profit increases over 50%, the residents will have no recourse unless the PA Legislature corrects a situation my opponent voted to create.

LOTTERY FUND AND HOME-AND-COMMUNITY BASED CARE

QUESTION: Do you support or oppose using lottery revenues to expand existing home-and-community based care programs offered by local Area Agencies on Aging?

AARP supports

Tom Peterson (Democrat) supports

Paul Clymer (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

The Pennsylvania Lottery was established to generate funds to benefit programs for the Commonwealth's older residents. Since 1972, when its first game went on sale, the Pennsylvania Lottery has contributed more than $17.4 billion to a wide variety of programs. Recently, because of new lottery offerings and changes in some of the programs the lottery supports such as PACE and the property tax/rent rebate program, the lottery has shown a significant surplus. Part of this surplus has been used for the long-term care Medicaid program, which funds mainly nursing home care, while another lottery program that provides home and community based care services through local Area Agencies on Aging has not seen an increase in funding.

AARP strongly supports the expansion of home-and-community based care services as an alternative to nursing home care. AARP believes lottery revenues should be used to expand existing lottery funded home-and-community based care programs instead of being diverted into the Medicaid long-term care program.

Tom Peterson (Democrat) RESPONSE:

I support using lottery revenues to support home and community based care so our seniors can continue to love where they are most comfortable. This cost effective program is both a cost saving measure as well as a better quality of life option for many of our seniors.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

AARP RESPONSE:

There are over 700,000 Pennsylvanians who are without health insurance in Pennsylvania. Various proposals have been made in the General Assembly this year to help more Pennsylvanians obtain health insurance and to ensure that insurance is more affordable for individuals and for businesses. AARP Pennsylvania supports measures to achieve access to affordable health care coverage for all individuals, an approach that would address the needs of those without public or private insurance or those at risk of losing coverage. Adequate health care coverage allows patients to receive essential treatment, including preventive care that can save the state millions of dollars.

AARP Pennsylvania supports incremental reforms that significantly improve coverage options for those without public or private insurance or those at risk of losing coverage. These reforms include encouraging employers to offer and expand coverage, and subsidizing the cost of private coverage for those who are uninsured, underinsured or at risk of losing coverage.

Tom Peterson (Democrat) RESPONSE:

Healthcare in Pennsylvania is in the top 20% of state in healthcare quality and in the bottom 20% in efficiency. We need to provide health care for all Pennsylvanians to bring down the cost of healthcare for all Pennsylvanians. This move to simplify healthcare administration toward one rule book can save $10 billion dollars cover everyone and generate high quality jobs across Pennsylvania.

PROPERTY TAX

QUESTION: What do you propose to do to lower the property tax burden on older Pennsylvanians yet still provide support for our schools?

Broaden the method of financing public education

Reduce burden of property taxes

Paul Clymer (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

As the Commonwealth's support for public education has fallen to a statewide average of approximately 35% of a school district's budget, property taxes have become the main source of funding for Pennsylvania's schools. Disparities in funding across Pennsylvania mean that some school districts rely on local funding, mainly property taxes, for over 80% of the district's budget. AARP believes we should broaden our method of financing public education, taking some of the burden off the regressive property tax, which is the single-most burdensome tax for many low-income and older people, and shifting to less regressive taxes, which are better correlated with the ability to pay.

Tom Peterson (Democrat) RESPONSE:

In 1980 when my opponent began to represent this district, our schools were supported by Harrisburg with 41% of the local budget. In 1983, he voted to break the promise of 50% funding for our schools. Today in our local school district less than 25% comes from the state. We need to return to 50% funding from the state. This will significantly decrease local property taxes that most directly affect our seniors unfairly. To accomplish this huge task, we need to simplify the complicated burden of unfunded mandates in transportation, special education, testing, discipline, construction and retirement. As a classroom teacher in some of the best and worst education situations in Pennsylvania, I know from the front lines where waste can be eliminated. As a former business consultant who has saved billions in corporate costs, I can lower the cost of government.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

QUESTION: Would you support or oppose the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate?

AARP supports

Tom Peterson (Democrat) supports

Paul Clymer (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

Insurance products have become increasingly complex and expensive. Currently, the Department of Insurance is charged with both regulating the insurance industry and protecting consumers, putting them at odds with both groups on certain issues. AARP supports the creation of an Insurance Consumer Advocate within the Pennsylvania Attorney General's Office that would function similar to the Public Utility Commissions Office of Consumer Advocate and represent the interests of the consumer in hearings.

Tom Peterson (Democrat) RESPONSE:

The current PA Insurance Commissioner has experience as a consumer advocate. That does not mean that future insurance commissioners will have those skills or attitude. We need an independent advocate for the consumer to make sure health care becomes affordable and available to all.

WINTER UTILITY SHUT-OFFS AND LIHEAP FUNDING

QUESTION 1: Do you support or oppose requiring utility companies to get PUC approval before cutting off service to residential customers in the winter months?

Paul Clymer (Republican) did not respond

QUESTION 2: Do you believe Pennsylvania should contribute state funds to the LIHEAP budget?

AARP supports

Tom Peterson (Democrat) supports

Paul Clymer (Republican) did not respond

AARP RESPONSE:

Home energy costs make up a considerable portion of household budgets. Exceedingly volatile natural gas, electricity and fuel oil prices in recent years have significantly increased energy costs facing many consumers. Older Americans are particularly vulnerable to rapid increases in energy prices. Older low-income households spend a higher percentage of total income on energy costs than do other households. AARP supports state programs to address energy affordability including bill payment assistance programs for low-income residential customers; automatic enrollment of electric and natural gas customers into assistance programs; and prohibitions on utilities from disconnecting or refusing to reconnect electric or natural gas service to low-income households during times when weather conditions threaten health and safety.
