

Older voters have identified Medicare as one of their top issues in the November elections, yet too many politicians fail to recognize the contributions Medicare makes to the economy and the health security of millions of Americans. Any candidates who fail to talk about how they would strengthen Medicare for future generations do so at their peril.

Fact Sheet: South Dakota

JULY 2018

Medicare Contributes $1.7 Billion to South Dakota's Economy

Medicare helped pay the health care costs of 155,656 Medicare beneficiaries in South Dakota in 2017, allowing its seniors to get the care they need and protecting them from serious financial burdens.

In addition, Medicare is a critical part of the economic infrastructure of South Dakota, investing about $1.7 billion in the state in 2017. Thousands of businesses, large and small, including hospitals, nursing homes, physicians' offices and medical device providers, rely on Medicare to exist and maintain their operations. Businesses in South Dakota receiving Medicare dollars use them to pay employee salaries, rent, and state and local taxes, as well as buy equipment and make capital improvements to their facilities.

In fact, Medicare spending in South Dakota is equivalent to about 21 percent of spending by state and local governments in South Dakota.

Here's how much Medicare* spent in South Dakota by health care service sector:

Hospitals	$1 billion
Physicians	$254 million
Other health professionals	$53 million
Skilled nursing facilities	$68 million
Home health care agencies	$39 million
Prescription drugs and medical supplies	$230 million
Durable medical equipment suppliers	$19 million
