

Social Security: 2012 Arizona Quick Facts

Arizona's 65+ population is expanding.

In 2010, Arizona's population was 6,677,000, with 13% being age 65 and older (900,000) residents.¹ In 2015, the 65+ population will make up 16% of the state's population, and in 2030, it will be 22%.^{2,3}

Arizona ranks 40th in per capita income.

The average personal income in Arizona was $34,999 in 2010. Arizona's per capita income (40th) ranks higher than New Mexico (43rd) and Utah (48th).⁴

One in six Arizona residents receive Social Security.

The Social Security program not only provides monthly benefits to retired workers, but also to families when the worker retires, dies, or becomes disabled. In 2010, over 54 million Americans received Social Security benefits; of these, 1,067,717 lived in Arizona.⁵

In 2010, one in six Arizona residents received Social Security.¹ While 68% of beneficiaries are retirees, 32% are not: 144,342 are people with disabilities; 76,573 are widows and widowers; 76,158 are children; and 45,827 are spouses.⁵

Arizona Social Security Beneficiaries

Social Security pumps over 14 billion dollars into Arizona's economy.

In 2010, Arizona residents received 14.1 billion dollars from Social Security.⁶ The average yearly Social Security benefit for an Arizona retiree in 2010 was $14,182— or about $1,182 a month.⁷

Nearly all Arizona residents age 65 or older receive Social Security.

Over 17% of all people receive Social Security benefits; in Arizona, 16% of residents do. However, older people are more likely to receive the benefit, with 92% of those ages 65 and over receiving it nationwide, and 84% of older Arizonans receiving it.¹

Social Security lifts more than one-third of retirees from poverty.

In 2009, more than one-third (35%) of the nation's older population would be living in poverty if they were not receiving Social Security. In Arizona, 28% of the state's 65+ population would have incomes below the poverty line if they did not receive Social Security.⁸

Social Security is the only source of income for three in ten Arizonans age 65+.

Social Security makes up 50 percent or more of the income for six in ten Arizonans age 65 and older. Three in ten of older Arizonans rely on Social Security as their only source of income.^{9,10}
