

Social Security: 2012 Oregon Quick Facts

Oregon's 65+ population is expanding.

In 2010, Oregon's population was about 3.9 million, with 14% being age 65 and older (534,000 residents).¹ In 2015, the 65+ population will make up 15% of the state's population, and in 2030, it will be 18%.^{2,3}

Oregon ranks 30th in income level among the states.

The average personal income in Oregon was $37,095 in 2010. Oregon's per capita income ranks higher than Arizona (40th), but lower than South Dakota (25th).⁴

About one in five Oregon residents receives Social Security.

The Social Security program not only provides monthly benefits to retired workers, but also to families when the worker retires, dies, or becomes disabled. In 2010, over 54 million Americans received Social Security benefits; of these, 712,216 lived in Oregon.⁵

In 2010, about one in five Oregon residents received Social Security.¹ While 68% of beneficiaries are retirees, 32% are not: 53,660 are widows and widowers; 97,786 are people with disabilities; 30,645 are spouses; and 43,537 are children.⁵

Oregon Social Security Beneficiaries

Social Security pumps more than nine billion dollars into Oregon's economy.

In 2010, Oregon residents received 9.4 billion dollars from Social Security.⁶ The average yearly Social Security benefit for an Oregon retiree in 2010 was $14,015—or about $1,168 a month.⁷

Nearly all Oregon residents age 65 or older receive Social Security.

Over 17% of all people receive Social Security benefits; in Oregon, 19% of residents do. However, older people are more likely to receive the benefit, with 92% of those ages 65 and over receiving it nationwide, and 95% of older Oregonians receiving it.¹

Social Security lifts more than one-third of retirees from poverty.

In 2009, more than one-third (35%) of the nation's older population would be living in poverty if they were not receiving Social Security. In Oregon, 43% of state's 65+ population would have incomes below the poverty line if they did not receive Social Security.⁸

Social Security is the only source of income for three in ten Oregonians age 65+.

Social Security makes up 50 percent or more of the income for three in five Oregonians age 65 and older. Three in ten of older Oregonians rely on Social Security as their only source of income.^{9,10}
