

Hispanic Businesses Concerned About Retirement and Think State Should Do More

Survey findings show that business owners and decision makers at Hispanic-owned small businesses in New Mexico (those with 1-100 additional employees) are concerned about their employees having enough money to retire. Nearly two-in-three (64%) are very or somewhat concerned (vs. 56% among all small businesses in NM). In addition, about three-quarters (76%) would like to see the state do more to encourage NM residents to save for retirement.

State Should Do More to Encourage Residents to Save for Retirement

Strong Support among Hispanic Businesses for State Retirement Savings Plan

Most Hispanic businesses in NM (73%) support legislation creating a basic, privately managed retirement plan that small businesses could use to address the issue of retirement. Furthermore, more than eight-in-ten (84%) agree that New Mexico lawmakers should support a plan to make it easier for small business owners to offer their employees a way to save for retirement. Support among the Hispanic small business community is stronger than the general NM small business community where 65% support the plan and 78% agree lawmakers should support the plan.

Support or Oppose a New Mexico Retirement Savings Plan

Agree or Disagree Lawmakers Should Support a New Mexico Retirement Savings Plan

Hispanic Businesses: Retirement Savings Plans Help Small Businesses Compete

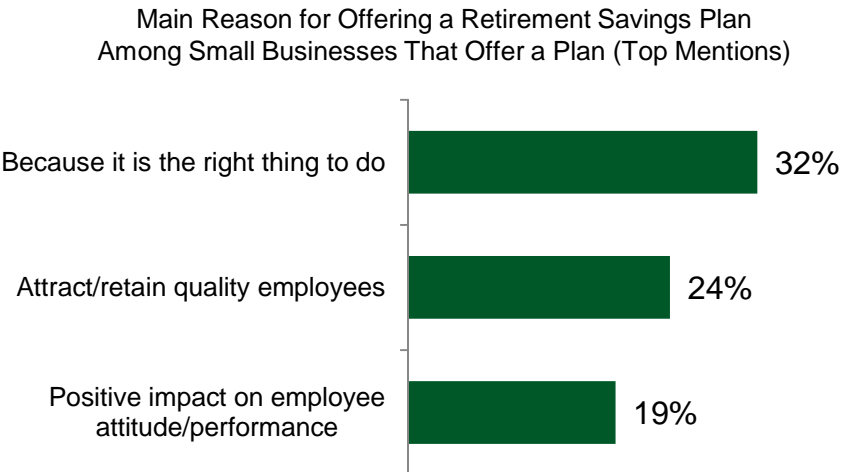

A strong majority of Hispanic small business owners/decision makers in NM (82%) agree that being able to offer a voluntary, portable retirement plan would help small businesses attract/retain quality employees and stay competitive (vs. 76% among the general NM small business community).

Agree or Disagree Offering a Retirement Plan Provides a Competitive Edge

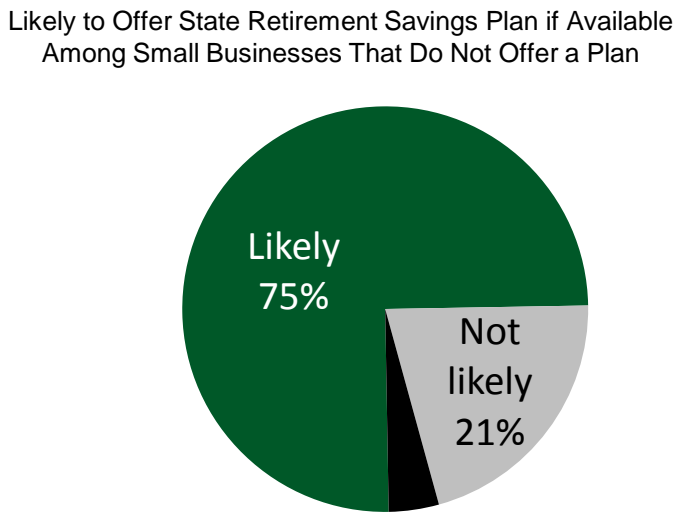

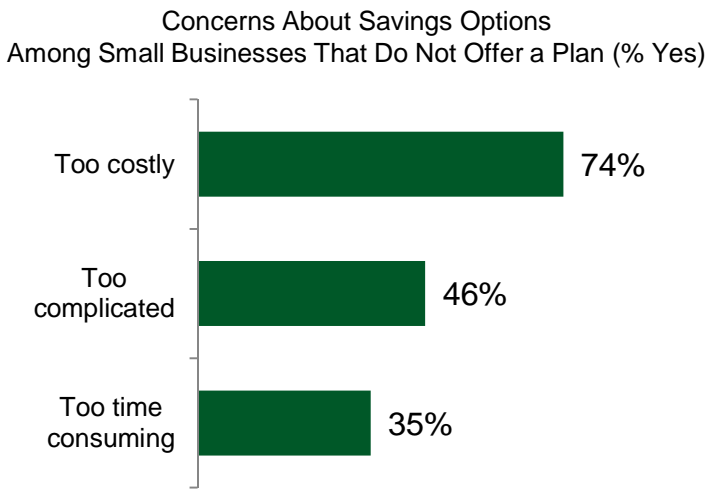

Hispanic Businesses Offer Retirement Plans Because It's the Right Thing to Do

Roughly one-in-four Hispanic small business owners/decision makers (26%) offer some type of retirement savings plan to their employees. Top reasons for offering a plan are that it is the right thing to do, it helps attract/retain quality employees, and it has a positive impact on employee morale.

Most Small Business Owners Who Don't Currently Offer Employees Retirement Savings Plans Would If a State Savings Plan Was Available

Among New Mexico Hispanic small business owners/decision makers who do not offer retirement plans to their employees, cost is a top concern of offering a plan. If the proposed legislation (which would operate at no cost to the business owner) were enacted, three-quarters (75%) say they likely would offer it to their employees (vs. 63% of all NM small businesses).

9. There are two proposals that New Mexico lawmakers are considering to help small businesses provide retirement savings plans to their employees.

One proposal..

- A) Creates a basic, ready to go or plug-and-play retirement plan that small business owners can use without having to operate or pay setup or maintenance costs. Small business owners would simply set up a payroll deduction for employees who choose to participate.

While the other...

- B) Creates a website bringing together existing retirement plans approved by the state that small business owners can use. Small business owners would pick a plan, pay for setup and maintenance costs, and operate the plan for employees who choose to participate.
