Objectives

- To determine the motivation behind solo travel (necessity or desire)
- To uncover if solo travel is a pain point and what specifically about solo travel are points of pain (planning, booking, fees, safety, finding roommates, etc.)
- What kinds of solo trips have they taken
- What destinations are most common for solo travelers
- What is the best part and worst part of traveling solo
Executive Summary

Sizing the Audience

• The Solo Traveler audience is not extremely large, but it is active.
  – Among AARP’s target audience of those 45+ who have traveled for leisure in the past 2 years and who use at least one online travel website, 37% claim to have taken a solo trip in the past.
  – On average, they have taken 4 solo trips
  – 81% are likely to take another solo trip in the next 12 months

• The Solo Traveler skews younger, 50-59 years old, and is more likely to be single or divorced than are those who are just thinking about solo travel, who skew married.

• But there is a large portion of the 45+ travel audience who show no interest in solo travel. That said, one-fourth admit the idea of traveling solo has stopped them from taking trips they would otherwise want to take.
Executive Summary

The Solo Traveler

- Whether it is the first trip or most recent trip, a solo trip is more likely a result of not having anyone available to travel with at that particular time versus the sheer desire or enjoyment of traveling alone.

- Most solo traveling takes place domestically without a tour group. Many take these trips so they can go somewhere they want to go or to treat themselves.

- And although many use online sites to plan and book their trip, social media sites have little influence on their solo travel decisions.

- Most choose a destination they have been to before, most likely a place they have been to with others.
  - The overwhelming destination of choice is a city/town, with the beach a distant second.

- The Solo Traveler is looking for a laid back and relaxing vacation. The best part of a solo trip is simply the chance to get out of town and to do something nice for themselves.

- Those who take solo trips are extremely satisfied with the experience, so much so that 81% say they plan on taking another one in the next 12 months.
  - This is not too surprising, since very few indicate having experienced issues planning their solo trip or having safety concerns.
Executive Summary

The Solo Dreamer

• Those who are planning to take a solo trip, the Dreamers, are doing so just because they want to and not necessarily because of any significant change in their life.

• Like the Solo Traveler, the Solo Dreamer is apt to use online resources to plan and book their trip, but few are influenced by social media sites, and it is definitely not where they draw their inspiration for taking such a trip.

• Their desire to go somewhere they want to go, an opportunity to treat themselves or to check something off their bucket list are the true motivators of solo travel among Dreamers.

• Although most have yet to solidify their plans for their solo trip, among those in the planning phase, 62% have already chosen their destination – which is primarily a city/town they have been to before with family or friends.

• They look forward to a laid back and relaxing vacation with little concerns about planning their trip. In fact, the majority do not express any concerns over the safety of traveling solo. Those with concerns mention budgeting, solo fees, and identifying activities at their destination.
SIZING THE AUDIENCE
Among the 45+ travel audience, approximately 4 out of 10 have a listening for marketing and opportunities specifically directed at the solo traveler.
Women are more likely than men to indicate they have not taken trips they would like to because they don’t wish to travel solo. This is true among both the population active in solo travel and among those who are not.
Audience Profiles

- Among AARP’s target audience of those 45+ who have taken a leisure trip in the past two years, those who have taken a solo trip, dream about a solo trip, or have no interest in a solo trip do not differ dramatically at a demographic level.

- That said, the Solo Traveler and Dreamer skew slightly younger and are more likely to be single or divorced than the non-traveler.

- Among Solo Travelers, those 45-49 are predominately male (78%). And among Blacks, they are predominately female (80%).

- Also, among Solo Travelers, AARP members lean female while non member Solo Travelers lean male.

KEY FINDINGS:
TRAVELERS
Solo Traveling – Why & When

• Why is the 45+ embarking on solo travel? While more than a quarter (27%) enjoy traveling solo, most (57%) take a solo trip because they do not have someone to travel with at the particular time.
  - There are no significant differences by gender

  Average Number of Solo Trips: 4

  Why Travel Solo?
  - Enjoy/Prefer to Travel Solo: 57%
  - No One To Travel With: 27%
  - Other: 14%

• Among 45+ travelers, solo travel is a relatively new experience: over half took their first solo trip in the past two years.

  First Solo Trip/Last Solo Trip
  - Past 2 years: 52% (First), 89% (Last)
  - 3 - 10 years ago: 14% (First), 6% (Last)
  - More than 10 years ago: 34% (First), 5% (Last)

Base: Total Solo Travelers (n=881)
Q5: And which of the following would you say was your initial reason for traveling solo on this most recent trip?
Q2/Q4: When did you take your first/most recent solo trip?
Inspiration for Trip - Solo Traveler

- Although there are a number of sources of inspiration, the primary motivators for traveling solo are a desire to go to a specific destination or simply to treat one’s self.
  - Blacks are more likely than Caucasians or Hispanics to use a solo trip as a spiritual opportunity (10% vs. 4% and 4%, respectively).
  - Those single or divorced are twice as likely as those married to cite “to meet new people” as their inspiration for traveling solo (13% and 8% vs. 4%, respectively).

Q7: For your most recent solo trip, what was your inspiration or motivation for traveling? Base: Total Solo Travelers (n=881)

Differences by Gender:
- Men are more likely to use a solo trip to pursue a hobby than women (24% vs. 11%), whereas women are more likely than men to use the trip for personal reflection (22% vs. 15%).
Planning the Trip – Solo Traveler

• The Solo Traveler makes all the arrangements themselves, with many using online tools to help them book their trip.

• About half will also use online tools to help them plan their trip, but far less will use it to dream up ideas.

• Popular travel sites used:
  – Expedia
  – Trip advisor
  – Travelocity

• American is the dominate choice among airlines for booking solo trips.

Q8. Who made the majority of the plans and arrangements for your trip? Base: Total Solo Travelers (n=881)
Q9: Did you use any online tools to help you…..? Base: Total Solo Travelers (n=881)
Q9b: What specific online tools or sites did you use? Base: Solo Travelers who used online sites (n=749)
Social Media’s Influence - Solo Traveler

- Social media sites have little influence on a Solo Traveler’s decision to take their most recent trip.
  - Social media does have a greater influence, however, among those aged 45-49 than among those aged 50+.
- Among those who do use such sites, Facebook is noted as most helpful, with input on what to see and do being the most sought after content.
  - Women gravitate more toward Pinterest while men gravitate more toward Twitter.
- According to other AARP research, about four in ten adults aged 50+ are accessing social media sites at least daily. As social media adoption and usage becomes more prevalent with this cohort, social media may play a larger role in solo travel.

Trip Details – Solo Traveler

- Most solo trips are to a domestic destination without a tour group
  - Of those traveling internationally, men (20%) are more likely than women (14%) to go it alone.

- Among those who have a budget for their solo trip (57%), the average anticipated spend for a domestic trip is ~$1,100 and ~$3,500 for an international trip.

- Most appear to stick to their desired budget while on the trip.

Base: Total Solo Travelers (n=881)

Q12. Which of the following best describes the type of trip you took?

Q13a: When you were first planning this trip, approximately how much did you budget for it? Q13b: And approximately how much did this trip cost you?

Average Budget: $1,160
Average Spend: $1,075

Average Budget: $3,460
Average Spend: $3,200
A city/town is by far the most popular destination for the Solo Traveler.

Solo Travelers tend to pick destinations they have been to in the past, primarily with others.

*On the water includes, Cruise, Lakes, Rivers

Base: Total Solo Travelers (n=881)
Q14c: Had you ever traveled to this location before?
Q16: Which of the following best describes the type of location you visited on this trip?
Actual Destination – Solo Traveler

- Most solo trips are taken within the U.S. with sunny destinations topping the list; California, Florida, Las Vegas
  - Significantly more African Americans choose a domestic destination than other ethnicities.
  - Married solo travelers are also more likely to pick a domestic destination, whereas those of another marital status (single, divorced, widowed) are more likely than married travelers to select an international destination.

Differences by Gender:

With the exception of slightly more women than men going to California, there are no significant differences in where each gender goes on their solo trip.
Transportation/Accommodations – Solo Traveler

- The majority of Solo Travelers take a plane to their destination of choice.

- While at their destination, they appear to use a variety of transportation options with a vehicle, personal or rented, being the most common.

- A hotel is the most popular accommodation choice among Solo Travelers.
  - Those who say ‘Other’ reference personal homes, condos, timeshares, etc.

“Typically don’t travel solo, missed having a companion.”

“I prefer travelling with family/friends.”

“Now married, so not likely to travel alone for pleasure.”

“Given my partners schedule, sometimes I have to travel alone.”
KEY FINDINGS:
DREAMERS
Why Solo Travel – Solo Dreamer

- The majority of those thinking about or planning a solo trip in the next 12 months, the Dreamers, are not considering solo travel because they experienced a major life event.

- It appears reasons for solo travel are a combination of those who do not have anyone to travel with at a specific time and those who simply want to give it a try.
  - Women are more likely than men to claim no travel companion as their reason for a potential solo trip.

Are There Life Changes at Play?

Q40: Based on your experience planning trips with other people, what part of the travel process, if anything, do you think will be more difficult now that you are traveling solo? Q41a: Thinking about the trip you are considering, do you have any safety concerns?
Methodology

• A 10-minute online survey was conducted among males and females, 45+, who have taken at least one trip 50 miles or more away from home, with a two-night stay, in the past two years.

• Respondents were identified as either have taken a solo trip in the past or intend to take one in the next 12 months

• The survey was in field from July 9 - 27, 2014

• A total of n=1,202 surveys were completed

• Final counts are detailed in the table to the right
Methodology: Caveat

• During data analysis, it was discovered that a small portion of the respondents misunderstood the type of solo travel being researched.

• Instead of taking an entire trip by themselves, n=105 were in the study because they traveled by themselves, but were ultimately connected with friends or family at their destination.

• To ensure the data represents true solo travelers, those identified at Q3b and Q5 who did not take a solo trip have been removed from data, resulting in a total of n=1,097 available for analysis.
